NEW QUESTION: 2

The "gray box testing" methodology enforces what kind of restriction?

- A. Only the internal operation of a system is known to the tester.
- B. The internal operation of a system is completely known to the tester.
- C. Only the external operation of a system is accessible to the tester.
- D. The internal operation of a system is only partly accessible to the tester.

Answer: D

Explanation:

A black-box tester is unaware of the internal structure of the application to be tested, while a white-box tester has access to the internal structure of the application. A gray-box tester partially knows the internal structure, which includes access to the documentation of internal data structures as well as the algorithms used.

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

You can log in to Office 365 as an Office 365 Administrator and view the Service Health Page to view the status of your Office 365 services. You can use the Service Health Page to view information on the status of your services for the current day or you can select the last 6 days or 30 days for a historical view.

The following icons are used in the Service Health Page:

A plain green tick indicates that the service is available and there have been no incidents during the reported time period.

A grey question mark in a circle indicates that a potential issue is currently under investigation.

A plain green tick with a plus sign indicates that a reported issue was a false positive.

A white down arrow in a red circle indicates that the service is offline.

A white up arrow in an orange circle indicates that a service incident is currently being resolved.

A white right-facing arrow in an orange circle indicates that the service is degraded.

A white exclamation mark in a blue circle indicates that there was an incident during a previous day and that more information is displayed in the Today column.

A white square indicates that a post incident report has been published.

A white tick in a green square indicates that an incident was active earlier today, but service has been restored

Microsoft says that they will publish a post-incident review within five business days. Therefore, it is possible that a post-incident review could be issued today.
