NEW QUESTION: 2

An employer sponsors a defined postemployment benefit plan. If the given amount of the present value of the defined benefit obligation exceeds the given amount of the fair value of plan assets, the defined benefit liability to be recognized in the balance sheet is greatest when the employer has:

- A. Net unrecognized actuarial losses and no past service cost.
- B. Net unrecognized actuarial losses and unrecognized past service cost
- C. Net unrecognized actuarial gains and no past service cost.
- D. No unrecognized actuarial gains or losses and unrecognized past service cost.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The amount of the defined benefit liability recognized equals the present value of the defined benefit obligation (DBO) at the balance sheet date, plus (minus) unrecognized actuarial gains (losses) minus unrecognized past service cost, minus the fair value of plan assets at the balance sheet date. If this amount is negative, it represents an asset. However, the maximum that may be recognized for such an asset is the sum of unrecognized actuarial losses, unrecognized past service cost and the present value of future refunds from the plan or reductions in future contributions. Moreover, the application of this section should not result in a gain being recognized solely because of an actuarial loss or past service cost in the current period or in a loss being recognized solely because of an actuarial gain in the current period. Thus, if the excess of the DBO over the fair value of plan assets is constant, net unrecognized actuarial gains will increase the liability. Net unrecognized actuarial losses and unrecognized past service cost decrease the liability.
