NEW QUESTION: 3

Refer to the to the network topology below.

You have IPS software Blades active on security Gateways sglondon, sgla, and sgny, but still experience attacks on the Web server in the New York DMZ. How is this possible?

A. The attacker may have used a bunch of evasion techniques like using escape sequences instead of clear text commands. It is also possible that there are entry points not shown in the network layout, like rouge access points.

B. An IPS may combine different detection technologies, but is dependent on regular signature updates and well-tuned anomaly algorithms. Even if this is accomplished, no technology can offer 100% protection.

C. Since other Gateways do not have IPS activated, attacks may originate from their networks without any noticing.

D. All of these options are possible.

Answer: D
