NEW QUESTION: 1

A company's application is increasingly popular and experiencing latency because of high volume reads on the database server.

The service has the following properties:

- A highly available REST API hosted in one region using Application

Load Balancer (ALB) with auto scaling.

- A MySQL database hosted on an Amazon EC2 instance in a single Availability Zone.

- The company wants to reduce latency, increase in-region database read performance, and have multi-region disaster recovery capabilities that can perform a live recovery automatically without any data or performance loss (HA/DR). Which deployment strategy will meet these requirements?

A. Use Amazon ElastiCache for Redis Multi-AZ with an automatic failover to cache the database read queries. Use AWS OpsWorks to deploy the API layer, cache layer, and existing database layer in two regions. Use Amazon Route 53 health checks on the ALB to trigger a DNS failover to the standby region if the health checks in the primary region fail. Back up the MySQL database frequently, and in the event of a failure in an active region, copy the backup to the standby region and restore the standby database.

B. Use AWS CloudFormation StackSets to deploy the API layer in two regions. Migrate the database to an Amazon Aurora with MySQL database cluster with multiple read replicas in one region and a read replica in a different region than the source database cluster. Use Amazon Route 53 health checks to trigger a DNS failover to the standby region if the health checks to the primary load balancer fail. In the event of Route 53 failover, promote the cross-region database replica to be the master and build out new read replicas in the standby region.

C. Use AWS CloudFormation StackSets to deploy the API layer in two regions. Add the database to an Auto Scaling group. Add a read replica to the database in the second region. Use Amazon Route 53 health checks in the primary region fail. Promote the cross-region database replica to be the master and build out new read replicas in the standby region.

D. Use Amazon ElastiCache for Redis Multi-AZ with an automatic failover to cache the database read queries. Use AWS OpsWorks to deploy the API layer, cache layer, and existing database layer in two regions. In the event of failure, use Amazon Route 53 health checks on the database to trigger a DNS failover to the standby region if the health checks in the primary region fail. Back up the MySQL database frequently, and in the event of a failure in an active region, copy the backup to the standby region and restore the standby database.

Answer: B

Explanation:

B: Not multi-region.

C: Adding database to Auto Scaling group? Is that possible?

D: Live recovery is required.

NEW QUESTION: 2

What is the result of applying this access control list?

A. TCP traffic with the ACK bit set is allowed

B. TCP traffic with the SYN bit set is allowed

C. TCP traffic with the URG bit set is allowed

D. TCP traffic with the DF bit set is allowed

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

The established keyword is only applicable to TCP access list entries to match TCP segments that have the ACK and/or RST control bit set (regardless of the source and destination ports), which assumes that a TCP connection has already been established in one direction only. Let's see an example below:

Suppose you only want to allow the hosts inside your company to telnet to an outside server but not vice versa, you can simply use an "established" access-list like this:
access-list 100 permit tcp any any established access-list 101 permit tcp any any eq telnet
! interface S0/0 ip access-group 100 in ip access-group 101 out
